Illustrated Text Book of Signs

Fundamentally Universal and International

A knowledge of these Signs would be very useful where absolute quiet is demanded or where speech could not be heard on account of disturbance or distance. Acquainted with these Signs persons hard of hearing could hold private conversations unheard by the neighbors in adjoining rooms. Likewise the varied individual gestures and frequent misunderstandings of many oral deaf-mute pupils would be avoided with the help of Universal Signs.

How to Converse with the Adult Deaf

When making the letters the arm should be held in an easy position near the body with the forearm as indicated in the illustrations.

In signing, ease and naturalness should be the guides. When a number of signs are made in succession as in conversations, the hands should fall from the last sign into the next without a stop so that the movement of the hands and arms is continuous. However, the grouping of the sign according to the sense makes the interpretation easy, just as punctuation in our ordinary language aids in clearness.

Most signs represent some distinct action, shape or characteristic of the object signified, but in many cases use has modified the sign to such an extent that the original natural sign is hard to be recognized.

The sign expressing an idea can be used for a noun, verb, adjective and all parts of speech of the same idea, but words spelt alike and having different ideas cannot be interchanged.

The tense sign, "past" "present" and "future" are used only when necessary to make the time understood. Use only those signs as are necessary to make the meaning clear, as "city" "now" is sufficient to express, "Are you going to the city any time today?"

An idea is presented in the manner of a picture rather than in an order corresponding entirely with grammatical arrangement, but prayers in common are usually signed word for word. Manner, emphasis, speed and slowness aid expression of ideas: the placing of the finger tip on the lips would signify "silence" but to throw the tip of the finger to the lips with force and with expression of fear or of seriousness would mean a great deal more.

N. B. All motions of the face that have nothing to do with the idea should be avoided. Either sign or talk, do not try to do both at the same time. Any word can be expressed with the alphabet, which is often done for variety and when signs are unknown or forgotten. When preaching use larger gestures and sign more slowly than in conversation.

N. B. Some illustrations are presented in profile for the sake of clearness.

To illustrate what is meant by "picture" "manner" "emphasis" and "position" take this instance—"Long ago, a man was standing on the gable end of a very high house, suddenly the man toppled over sidewise and fell from his elevated position to the ground. The distance of the fall was so great that his body made several complete turns, over and over in the air before he struck the ground. He was dashed to the ground flat on his back and died within a few moments. We shall sign the foregoing as follows. "Past" (Hand being pushed additionally backward to denote a "long time passed") "House" "High" ("Tall" signed slowly to indicate the great height of house, the eyes may follow as if looking up the side of a building of great height) "Male" (for "man") "Stand" (Made locally so that the inverted "V" tips are standing on the gable point of the "house" just signed. Then the inverted "V" falls to one side quickly and whirls over and over slowly to indicate great height. The hand descends slowly during these turns, but the last part of the fall is quickly straight to the ground as all objects naturally seem to fall. The right hand comes to a rest with a jerk, to show the sudden shock, and is supine to indicate that the victim fell on his back.) "Death" (signed slowly to indicate that death is not instantaneous and then followed by "Finish" to tell that all is over.) (The expression of the face in keeping with the ideas adds very much to the fullness of the expression.) Illustration of this incident follows:—

Key to Definitions

- "A" hand.....Hand forming such a letter.
"&" hand.....Hand with tips together as in completed sign for "and".
Horizontal.....Parallel with the floor.
Vertical.....Entire hand pointing upward; if it refers to palm only then bones of hand, proper, point upward.
Inward.....Towards body.
Outward.....From the body frontwards.
Backward.....Towards the back.
Combination of directions as "up to the right" or "out to the left"—An oblique direction.
"Out-down-in-up" or "Right-up-left-down-right" denotes a circle or curved line according to directions.
Palm towards palm..Palms facing each other.
Palm to palm.....Palms applied to each other.
Prone.....Palm down.
Supine.....Palm up.
Edgewise.....Horizontal and neither prone nor supine.
Inverted.....Pointing downward.
Tandem.....In a line, or one behind the other.
Several pictures of same name and numbered, denote successive motions for one sign.
Pictures of same name but not numbered denote different signs for same idea.
